

Pittsburgh, Pa.

Tuesday, Nov. 28, 2006

Pittsburgh ranked third among midwestern cities as fertile ground for investing in biotech startups, according to a survey of 54 health-focused venture capital firms. The survey, conducted by Cleveland-based economic development group BioEnterprise, said Minneapolis/St. Paul and Cleveland, respectively, took the top two slots for quality investment deals.